THE PROGRAM

The Clinical Leadership Program was created in collaboration with the Duke University School of Medicine, School of Nursing, Fuqua School of Business, School of Law and Terry Sanford Institute for Public Policy to provide a comprehensive learning experience for the health care professional in the discipline of leadership. The Clinical Leadership Program continues to partner with faculty from these schools and beyond to engage students in exploring and learning about health care issues from the perspectives of business, finance, informatics, law, policy, population health, quality management and strategic planning. The program is designed for clinical professionals, who are new to or would like to pursue leadership positions in the dynamic health care environment.

THE DEGREE

The Master of Health Sciences in Clinical Leadership is a professional degree awarded by the School of Medicine at Duke University. The degree requires 26 units of graded course work on core course topics plus 5 thought-provoking seminars for which a total of 10 units of credit are given and a transformative health care team project for which 6 units of credit are given. The Master of Health Sciences in Clinical Leadership Program provides clinicians and other health care professionals with the training necessary to be adept and versatile leaders who can respond effectively to the complexities of the changing health care environment.
