

Gordon G. Hammes Faculty Teaching Award

Purpose of the Award:

The Gordon G. Hammes Faculty Teaching Award is determined by a committee of graduate students that is assembled each year. This award is named for Gordon G. Hammes, who served as Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs from 1991 to 1998. In view of his longstanding commitments to Duke University School of Medicine graduate students, and his contributions as a gifted teacher and mentor, the School of Medicine established this award in his honor to recognize each year a Faculty member for continuing excellence in teaching and mentoring, and for exemplary commitment to the education of graduate students within Basic Science Departments and Graduate Training Programs of the School of Medicine.

Previous Award Recipients

2020: John Pearson, PhD
2019: Corinne Linardic, MD, PhD
2018: Jane F. Pendergast, PhD
2017: Megan L. Neely, PhD
2016: Andrew Alspaugh, MD
2015: Patrick C. Seed, MD, PhD
2014: R. Lee Reinhardt, PhD
2013: Christopher Nicchitta, PhD
2012: Shiva Das, PhD
2011: Anne West, MD, PhD
2010: Douglas Marchuk, PhD
2009: David Richardson, PhD
2008: Theodore Slotkin, PhD
2007: Mohamed A. Noor, PhD
2006: Blanche Capel, PhD
2005: David R. McClay, PhD
2004: Donald P. McDonnell, PhD
2003: Daniel J. Lew, PhD
2002: Jo Rae Wright, PhD
2001: Kenneth N. Kreuzer, PhD